How the Abduction of a Woman is Foiled by her ingenious Lover.

Section A. Translate this passage on alternate lines.

[30 marks]

olim in Italia latrones villam Milonis ingressi divitias eius abstulerunt. unus latro, quem alii in urbe reliquerant, mox cognovit advenam, nomine Lucium, accusatum esse furti quod epistulam falsam Miloni tulisset atque clam nocte fugisset.

interea ceteri latrones, dum ad speluncam redeunt, feminam conspexerunt quae ad urbem contendebat. latrones laetissimi erant. "facile erit nobis," dicebant, "eam capere quod sola est. venalicius nobis multam pecuniam dabit quod pulcherrima est." 5 surrexit dux latronum, iratus quod ille advenam secum duxerat. "nonne vita nostra," rogavit, "satis dura est? num nobis plus periculi afferre vis? cur, contempto meo consilio, hunc duxisti?" deinde caput comitis pulsaturus erat, sed ab aliis circumstantibus raptus est. 10

latro, -onis m.	– robber	spelunca, -ae f.	– cave advena, -ae m.	– stranger	venalicius, -i m.	– slave-dealer furtum, -i n.	– theft, robbery	affero = adfero
clam (adv.)	– secretly	contemno, -ere	– despise, reject

Section B. Read the next part of the story and answer the 2 sets of questions.
(Vocabulary previously given is not repeated here.)

subito advena dixit: "sum Haemus, latro notissimus omnis Thraciae. sed comites meos amisi postquam villam centurionis divitis ingressi sumus. nam cum, bonis eius ablatis, discederemus, ianua tantum sonitum fecit ut uxor eius quiete excitata sit. illa in hortum currens servos vocavit ut adiuwarent. qui cum advenissent, amicos meos secuti sunt pecunia oneratos. ipse vix effugi." deinde Haemus, pecunia in medios latrones iacta, "accipite me," inquit, "in vestram manum. omnia quae mecum tuli libens vobis dabo." 5 statim Haemus feminam adduci iussit vinumque parari. cum latrones bibissent, etiam persuasit eis ut decem homines e manu sibi darent qui feminam patri redderent. primo irati erant quod praemium suum amittere videbantur; ubi autem ostendit patrem plus pecuniae daturum esse quam venalicium, laeti erant. mox intravit femina tristis. 10 postquam tamen Haemum conspectum agnovit, locutura erat sed ille minima voce, ne a ceteris audiretur, hortatus est ut taceret. deinde ad latrones versus, "nunc nobis eundum est," inquit. "sequimini me atque hanc feminam diligenter custodite. feminam tam pulchram et tanta pecunia dignam amittere nolo."

Thracia, iae f.	– Thrace (in Northern Greece)	ostendo, -ere	– show, prove quies, -tis f.	– (here) sleep	minima voce	– in a whisper onero, - are	– to burden, weigh down	sequamini	– (dep.) plural imperative manus, -us f.	– (here) band
libens, -entis	– willingly

Section C. Read & translate, on alternate lines, the final part of the story. [35 marks] cum ad urbem advenissent, Haemus ante ianuam magnae villae constitit. "nisi mens mea decipit," sibi dixit, "hic habitant divites qui multos servos habent." deinde latronibus inquit, "haec est villa patris huius feminae. ipse cum femina intrabo.

vos prope ianuam manentes viam custodite." 15 ingressus tamen domino inquit, "quamquam minime notus tibi sum, per deos oro te ut me adiuves. sum Marcus qui hanc uxorem meam (feminam manu ostendit) nocte amisi. dum eam quaero, a civibus qui rem viderant, cognovi eam a latronibus esse captam. nunc eam vix servavi, quod latronibus persuasi ut me acciperent. mitte servos ut et omnes latrones hic et in spelunca eorum comprehendant." 20 hoc facto milites ad speluncam latronum duxit ubi latrones iam vino victos facile superaverunt.
